

Why is software licensing with source-code advantageous?

This is a unique opportunity to obtain the rights of a tailorable industry-targeted, out-of-the-box software solution, and transition both technology and application knowledge to your internal technical team.

The ability to manage and control your software applications is critical to your business. The option to license software with source code gives your organization the flexibility to alter the solution to best fit your needs, gain competitive advantage and differentiate your business from other in the crowded marketplace.

This platform leverages many years of customer-gathered knowledge, industry expertise and thousands of hours of research & development. It has been built on industry best practices, with a high level of innovative functionality and several core processes that can be utilized by the majority of TPAs.

The price of software licensing with source code is often far less than the cost of building your own software of similar capabilities. Developing software from scratch is expensive, difficult and time-consuming process. This software platform meets most of TPA's administration and billing needs and can be implemented rapidly.

This latest version of FlexTPA has been deployed to live production on a centrally hosted, professionally managed environment since 2016. Its functionality, workflows, business logic and data models have been tried, tested and further optimized.

A number of large TPA organizations have already acquired this type of licensing with source code and have deployed it successfully to manage new strategy, enhance operational performance and the value of the business.

We believe FlexTPA offers the most comprehensive and flexible software solution for TPAs today.
